

Guidelines for using the enema

Issued by the Endoscopy Team

This leaflet gives you information about using the enema. Please read it carefully before you use the enema.

Why do I need to use an enema?

In order to see the lining of your bowel more clearly during the examination it is helpful if your back passage is empty. An enema is a quick and convenient way to do this as it increases the water content of your stools.

What are the benefits?

You may find it more convenient and comfortable to use the enema at home. It is easy to self-administer and you only need to use it once before the examination. You will be able to eat and drink as normal up to 30 minutes before using the enema.

What are the risks in using the enema?

If this is the first time using an enema, do not worry. Enemas are safe, gentle and simple to use. Please read the manufacturer's information leaflet supplied with the enema alongside this leaflet. If you have any concerns or queries contact the Endoscopy Unit where you are having your test.

When not to use the enema

Do not use the enema if you are having treatment for kidney disease or colitis, but bring it with you when you go for the test.

What are the side effects of the enema?

Like all medicines, an enema can cause side effects for some people. Some people may feel faint or dizzy, or experience mild stomach cramps for a short while, nausea or vomiting, or anal irritation.

When do I use the enema?

Use the enema about one hour before you leave home for the test.

Do not eat for at least 30 minutes before using the enema.

Do not eat after using it. You will be able to eat straight after the test.

You may drink water before the test, but not other drinks.

You should use the enema even if you have just had your bowels open.

Before using the enema

Make sure you are near a toilet.

Find somewhere comfortable to lie down, and have a towel to lie on.

Have a book, magazine or radio with you to occupy you for about 5 minutes while waiting for the enema to work.

How do I use the enema?

Smear the lubricating jelly on the enema nozzle (first 3 inches).

Pull out the tip from the nozzle, hold the enema upright so it does not spill.

Lie on your left side on the towel.

Insert the nozzle (3 inches, up to the disc) gently into your back passage.

Squirt the contents in, remove the nozzle. Remain lying down.

Try to hold the liquid for 5 minutes but do not worry if you cannot hold it that long. Go to the toilet but do not worry if you do not pass a motion.

Stay near a toilet for the next hour.

If you feel faint or dizzy lie down until you feel better.

The enema works almost immediately, so you should have no problems travelling to the hospital.

What if the enema does not work?

If you have just had your bowels open, you may not pass much, but even if you do not pass anything after the enema – you should still come to the hospital for your test. We will perform a digital examination of your back passage to see if there is any stool, and you may be given another enema.
