

Discharge advice for a suspected scaphoid (wrist) fracture

Issued by the orthopaedic department

We suspect that you may have broken one of the small bones in your wrist.

This fracture may not be visible on the initial x-ray immediately after your injury.

The majority of these injuries are not fractures and can be treated successfully with a wrist splint.

We would like to see you again in clinic

An orthopaedic trauma consultant (a doctor who specialises in fractures) has reviewed your x-rays and you should now have received an appointment to attend the fracture clinic.

At the clinic your injury will be reviewed by an orthopaedic surgeon and we will advise on any further care needed, such as x-rays and the duration for which the splint will need to be worn.

In some cases, an operation may be required. If so, we will discuss this with you further at the clinic.

Wrist splint

The wrist splint will help your pain, and may be removed for personal hygiene if your pain is tolerable.

The splint can be discarded if you have no pain.

Painkillers

We suggest paracetamol and ibuprofen, if you can take them, ask your pharmacist for advice.

Movement

Be guided by any pain or discomfort you feel.

You can start to move your wrist without the splint if you do not have any pain.

When can I return to regular activities?

It may take six weeks or longer before your hand and wrist returns to normal.

We wish you a speedy recovery.
