

Discharge advice for an adult's clavicle fracture (broken collar bone)

Issued by the orthopaedic department

You have broken your collar bone (clavicle). The vast majority of these fractures are treated with a shoulder sling for 4-6 weeks. The eventual recovery with this treatment is usually very good.

We would like to see you again in clinic

An orthopaedic trauma consultant (a doctor who specialises in fractures) has reviewed your x-rays and you should now have received an appointment to attend the fracture clinic.

At the clinic your injury will be reviewed by an orthopaedic surgeon and we will advise on any further care needed, such as x-rays and the duration for which the sling will need to be worn.

In some cases, an operation may be required. If so, we will discuss this with you further at the clinic.

Shoulder sling

The sling will help support the weight of your arm which will help relieve your pain.

We recommend that you exercise your hand and wrist.

Gradually start exercising by rotating your forearm in the sling.

Be guided by the level of discomfort you feel.

We suggest you remove your sling twice a day and gently bend and straighten your elbow whilst supporting the weight of your arm.

These movements will help reduce hand swelling and prevent stiffness of the joints in your upper limb.

Painkillers

We suggest paracetamol and ibuprofen, if you can take them, ask your pharmacist for advice.

The pain usually greatly improves after two weeks.

Sleeping

It may be more comfortable to sleep propped up on several pillows in bed or in a reclining armchair in the early days after the injury.

When can I return to regular activities?

It may take up to six weeks before you can return to regular activities. This may be longer if your work involves strenuous use of your upper limb.

We wish you a speedy recovery.
